- 6:00 p.m. daily. An inspection group boards ships before they enter and leave the inner harbor. The group searches for possible stowaways and propaganda material and seals all cameras and binoculars. Only the ship's captain was allowed to go ashore.
- 2. In mid-January 1952, there was little activity at the harbor. There were no ships in the harbor when informant's vessel arrived, and no steamships of any kind either entered or left the harbor while informant was at Burgas. Two Soviet motor boats of unspecified size and description entered the harbor, but informant could not observe any activity resulting from the arrival of the
- 3. Informant saw three or four young Soviet army officers walking about the streets of Burgas. He did not see any soldiers, military vehicles, weapons, or aircraft. There was very little food available in the shops.
